Henry Dunster of the seventh generation from President Dunster and her uncle is Henry Dunster of the eighth generation. Her grandfather, Rev. Sylvanus Landrum, D. D., is buried at Memphis Tenn., where he was pastor in the fearful yellow fever epidemic of 1870. Miss Landrum understands so thoroughly the problems of the South and of the Christian college under Baptist control and is withal so splendidly trained that it is expected that her coming to the faculty of Tennessee College will strengthen the college in all phases of its activity.

WHERE IS MOTHER?

(By Mrs. Mollie Dykes)

Have you ever considered how often this question is asked in the ordinary home? Mother is the most needed person in the whole family, the little infant, before it is old enough to utter a word asks the question by crying when it needs something. Little children are diligent in asking the question when they find mother out of sight, older children keep up the habit. The husband and father expects mother to be in the house when he enters it and his first question upon entering and finding mother out of sight is, where is mother? Where is mother? She may be preparing a meal, may be sitting by the side of some sick child, may be bending over the washtub, may be in some neighbors' house giving comfort and help to the distressed and needy there, may be lying on a couch suffering from a violent headache, may be in her closet upon her knees praying for some wayward son or daughter. But mother is Human. She has a body that is capable of becoming exhausted feelings, that are capable of being wounded a sweet disposition, that is capable of being soured, many a woman who might have been an agreeable companion and a noble mother has been transformed into a being that is anything else but agreeable and noble because they didn't have the treatment they deserved or should have had, next to God she is your best friend, next to God she should have the first place in your heart show your affections by the way you speak to her and be careful that nothing in your life grieves her. Throw as much sunshine around her path as you can for you will not have her with you long, where is mother, is she still here or has the lord taken her home, they whose mother are with them do not realize what a treasure they have. Prize her while you have her with you, add to her days by doing all you can to make her life cheerful, and her burdens light. Where is mother, is she still with you? Thank God for your treasure. Has she gone on to her eternal rest, see that your life is such that when God calls you from time to eternity you can meet her in the glory world. Mothers with a full heart ask prayers for their precious ones, and showing intense desire and with unselfish love for the young lives entrusted to them. So many women are earnestly trying to be better mothers. How many girls and boys are as really trying to be better daughters and sons, and why shouldn't they. (Selected.)

Elected Head of Tennessee College.

Miss Grace Landrum, daughter of Rev. W. W. Landrum, D. D., pastor of the Broadway Baptist Church in Louisville, Ky., has been elected professor of English and head of the department at Tennessee College to take up her duties in September, 1916. She will also be the Head of College Hall, acting as social adviser for the young women of the College. Miss Landrum took her A. B. degree at Radcliffe College, the coordinate woman's college connected with Harvard University and identical with Harvard in its requirements, and her A. M. degree in the department of English at the University of Chicago. At Radcliffe she was president of her class, won second year and final honors in Classics and was elected a member of the Radcliffe Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, the intercollegiate honor society, membership in which is conditioned on high scholarship. At the University of Chicago also she made an exceptionally fine record for scholarship. Her sympathy with the broad educational movements of the South is indicated by the fact that she has held the presidency of the Southern Association of College Women. She has had a number of years experience as a teacher in girls' schools of good standing and will bring with her work a remarkably strong equipment for this particular position, as well as a most gracious and charming personality.

It is of interest that Miss Landrum has an honored Baptist ancestry on both sides of her family and an ancestral connection with Harvard which must have given an unusual touch of sentiment to her experience at Radcliffe. On her mother's side, she is a lineal descendant in the ninth generation of Henry Dunster, first President in this continent, driven out of the colony for his Baptist views. Her grandfather was
